FOREWORD.

The Cultural Civilization of the old South was the work of seven generations of our early ancestors, before the "War Between the States," 1860-1864.

The sons and daughters reared within that period became Southerners by birth. They were land owners and slave holders. They became a distinctive homogeneous set of men and women—the blending of the best stock in Europe into one true and noble stock of people.

The Prude family was of French origin, coming into England, thence to Charleston, South Carolina. They were here during that period of amalgamation of the white races from Europe.

We must preserve the purity of our stock of Anglo-Saxon blood. We must watch with zealous care the State laws, the Constitution, the Jim Crow and marriage laws and prevent a mixing of the Mongrel races with our true southern stock.

In the South I have no fear as long as such men are in the Senate of the United States as John H. Bankhead, Walter George, Ed Smith of South Carolina, and Tydings of Maryland. Our stock of people was pure and uncontaminated in 1864 and has remained inviolate for 70 years. Our younger generation must stand by our Cultural Civilization which will remain as white as the drifting snow for centuries to come.

I was born before the Civil War, was rocked in the cradle by the hand of an old "black mammy," reared in the heart of the deep south and I was taught to believe in, and respect the principles which our fathers fought to defend, we believed them to be just, moral, and true. After I had grown up to manhood; had passed out from the classic shades of collegiate lore, I was asked by the Alabama Historical Society to give some expression as to the "Growth and Importance of Genealogical Work in the South." What I said on that occasion has held good for forty years (1893), and I am reasonably sure that it will stand in history to mark the era which produced it. This is my reason for reproducing that work in full.

IMPORTANCE AND GROWTH

—OF—

Genealogical Work In the South

Mr. President and Gentlemen of the Alabama Historical Society:

A genealogical tree is not inviting to those who seek the excitement of sensational history, but, like the signs and numbers that guide the thoughts in an algebraic demonstration, this help is indispensable to a proper study and appreciation of true history.

The essential usefulness of history, whether personal or general, is that it marks the progress or the retrogression of the leading men and nations of the world in the constant struggle for higher achievements in physical, mental, and spiritual development, improvement and happiness. If happiness were not the expected result, these efforts would not be made.

The personal history of individuals, families, and associations, when aggregated in society, church, or State, constitutes the substance of the real structure of general history, as the grains of matter and the atoms of water comprise the substance of the physical world. One grain or atom, more or less, would cause a fatal defect in the structure of the world. So, every soul into whose existence the breath of life has come, who has been identified with the human body, must be an indispensable unit in the family of man in physical, mental, and immortal characteristics.

When the subject is viewed in this light, we can understand that it would not be an idle or useless task to preserve, in some form, the actual history of every sentient being. But, while this is done by the recording angel, for the purposes that are necessary in the future state, and could not be done in this life, nor could the record be read after a short period of accumulation, because of its volume, there are persons of distinction in matters of great importance to the human family, whose records are carefully collected, because of their extraordinary gifts or of the events with which they have been connected, as in the case of Shakespeare and George Washington.

After men have become so renowned as to make all the events of their experience of some value as witnesses of the progress of their development, succeeding generations become eager and active in exhuming the hidden records of their lives. If such efforts be long delayed, the truth is often left undiscovered, or it is perverted by the mistakes or the bias of those who would profit by this method of resurrection. These explorations are of little value, except for the revelation of the character, motives, and principles of those to whom they relate.

A thousand lives may be attended with incidents that are common to all, but, in the case of the man who has become very distinguished, such incidents become descriptive, and are classed among the qualities that contribute to his success, and they encourage the hopes and efforts of others. It is the general course of a human life that proves the character of the man, and not the special circumstances, whether they be good or evil, that have influenced his conduct at a particular time. It is this general character, whether good or bad, that impresses the minds of those who are influenced by the personal history of men who have been conspicuous in consequence of great actions, attended with important results.

Among the most general and trustworthy methods of ascertaining the causes of great successes in life, is the accepted doctrine of heredity. Whether or not this is a safe guide in all of our conjectures as to the future career of a person, it seems to be a true one, in a great number of cases, as to the course of life that has honorably distinguished individuals, families, and nations. In the opinion of the great majority, genealogy closely approaches the dignity of a true science, and few men have ever grown to conspicuous position in the world's esteem who have not gratefully attributed their success to certain high qualities of mind or heart that they inherited from father or mother, or both.

Almost every great man who has ever lived has had a consciousness that he was not endowed with his strength of mind or character by some peculiar gift, in his creation, that separated and distinguished him from his immediate or remote ancestors.

If this be the greatest cause of ancestral pride, it has a noble origin, and deserves to be applauded rather than despised. Whatever leads our affections to dwell upon the past with reverence and gratitude, will compel us to regard the future with a greater desire for right living and honorable success. It is by these rungs of the ladder that successive generations mount to higher planes of wisdom and virtue, and have the assistance of their knowledge of the past to strengthen their faith in hopefully realizing, in advance, "the evidence of things not seen."

It would be a great stimulus to family pride, which, along with pride of country, is the true characteristic of an elevated race of men, if our schools for children would encourage the pupils to write the names, places of birth, occupation, and even the leading traits of character of all who are related to them by blood or affinity. Such records would, probably, glow with undue praises and exaggerated estimates of the characters described, but they would also arouse the proud hopes of the children as to the parts they should attempt to fill in the drama of life, and would furnish models of conduct that they would aspire to imitate. Had such records been honestly made in the school-house, they would have deterred many men from courses of conduct that they have lived to regret. But the genealogy that is only collected in tradition, and taught to successive generations in the inaccurate stories of the family fireside, is a very important part of the education of every human being. The importance to be attached to the verity of these narratives is a strong argument for the encouragement of a faithful genealogy, which is impartial and sincere, since it is the skeleton of human history.

To the people of the Confederate States this is a work that justice requires to be done now, and it will be welcomed and applauded by every sentiment that is sacred to the human heart. Whatever else may have resulted from the war between the States, no honorable soldier who served in the Confederate army will be forgotten while one of his descendants lives on the earth. From generation to generation the memory of their connection with that service will be sacredly preserved as a mark of family distinction. The descendants of those who fought in the armies of the Revolution in 1776 are not more careful to preserve the history of their service than are those who can trace their lineage back to the soldiers of the Confederacy. The history of that conflict stands apart from all other great wars. It included nearly every man capable of bearing arms in the great volunteer armies, and many who were extremely young for such arduous warfare. Scarcely a woman or child in the seceding States escaped the direct and heavy burden of poverty, privation, and suffering in the midst of constant perils and alarms, all of which were confronted with heroic courage and dauntless devotion. The women and children have a record that is not eclipsed even by the martial glories of the greatest soldiers. The war was the result of causes that have forever disappeared, and the conditions attending it are impossible of repetition, so that its history may be one of severe impartiality. These circumstances have rendered the history of the war singular, and without precedent or parallel.

The genealogy of the people who fought under the Confederate flag is a profoundly interesting and instructive study. It deserves to be recorded with careful accuracy, as a memorial of men and of events which history cannot repeat.

An imperative demand will be made upon the present generation for a history of the Southern people which will show the facts as they are—which will speak the truth in an impartial and honest manner. Since history is but the combined action of the leading men of a nation, the genealogist should be active in gathering from the hidden records of the past such material as is necessary to form the basis upon which will be built a fair and true history of the Southern people—a history which will stand as a monument to their noble deeds.

Especially is genealogical work important in furnishing such facts as will enable the future historian to judge correctly and to establish the causes which have produced such wonderful development, growth, and high degree of civilization, which have ever characterized our Southern people as a distinctive and homogeneous race.

The ancestry of our Southern people is of mixed origin. The fact is very clear that the present generation has descended from the early settlers of Virginia and South Carolina colonies. If genealogical research is to be extended beyond the western hemisphere, we can well say that our far-away ancestors are to be found among the foreign nations of the world. The English, the Scotch-Irish, and the Huguenot blood predominated in the early settlers. Our social, moral, and political views received, in a large measure, the impress of the gentlemanly bearing and aristocratic ideas of the English cavalier, tintured here and there with the distinctive characteristics of the sturdy, indomitable will of the Scotch-Irish and the fiery temper and chivalric spirit of the Huguenot. The peculiar traits of character of each of these became so blended as to form the foundation of a distinct and homogenous race. I maintain that this is the foundation, and not the potent factor in developing or building the magnificent structure of distinctive Southern character. Other causes, in my opinion, have produced this result. Historians of enviable reputation have held, and with some degree of plausibility, that the high and noble traits of character which have elevated and pre-eminently distinguished the Southern people in the field and on the forum, are derived from the inter-mixture of ancestral blood in the earlier colonial days.

Macaulay, in speaking of the English cavaliers who came to our colonies, described them as "those opulent and well-descended gentlemen, to whom nothing was wanting of nobility but the name."

The historian who has given to the world the clearest and best, and the most impartial, statement of the Lost Cause which has yet appeared, is Percy Gregg, an English writer of high reputation. In speaking of the South, he refers to South Carolina as a typical Southern State. He says: "Most of the older States preserve throughout American history an individuality quite as distinct and persistent as that of leading Greek cities or great Roman families. . . . But, about all, the dauntless and defiant spirit, the fiery temper, the venturous chivalry of South Carolina, continually remind the student of American history of her mixed origin.

"The early infusion of the blood of the English cavaliers with that of the Huguenots, who, as their fanaticism softened, transmitted to their offspring the traditional gallantry and martial spirit of their Gascon ancestry. Nothing in her situation, geographical, political, or industrial, required her to take the foremost place in sectional conflict, but, in almost every collision, the Palmetto State came to the front as the promptest, fiercest, most determined champion of State sovereignty, slavery, and Southern interest."

Time united the interests of these Southern colonies. They laid the granite foundation of their institutions in personal purity, personal independence, and political liberty; and when our revolutionary fathers framed the Constitution, they settled the corner stone upon which was built the grandest monument to a liberty-loving people. The convention which framed this Constitution was led and controlled by Southern influences. Certain rights were guaranteed which proved to be especially beneficial to the Southern people, on account of the geographical position they occupied. These rights were not only guaranteed by the institutions of man, but were of divine ordination. Negro slavery in the South was of providential arrangement. I hold, Mr. President, that slavery was the most potent factor in producing and developing those true, honorable, and chivalrous traits of character which have marked with distinction Southern manhood and womanhood as the noblest work of God. I feel assured that when the diamond pen of the future historian shall have cut through the dust of ages and the prejudices of war, we shall catch bright glimpses of the kind revelation of the Master's will as they shine through the gilded pages of an impartial record.

Since the smoke of war has cleared away, two great truths have been revealed to us. The savage negro Christianized, and the Southern people the benefactors by having this mission placed in their hands. Our ancestors were born masters, dominating an inferior race. This necessarily led them to an innate desire to govern.

The South has never wanted for a brilliant leadership either in war or in the halls of legislation. Her record of military achievement stands out before the world pre-eminently grand. As the influence of slavery has permeated every known Southern institution, I am persuaded to the belief that the period which was covered by its influences will produce the most inviting field for genealogical research in the history of our country, and will yield the richest results for the future historian. For reasons stated, I shall speak fully upon the slaveholding era of our country, and the incidents which attended its existence.

Slaves imported from Africa, where they were held in the extreme duration of a barbaric slave code, without any knowledge of God, or a ray of the light of civilization, were held as chattels and sold as merchandise by a Christian and civilized people. The trade was brisk and lucrative, and the proprietorship was guaranteed, expressly, in the organic laws of the republic, when the government was first ordained. No greater government, nor one more in consonance with the spirit of a pure Christianity, was ever founded, nor one more careful of the rights and liberties of the people, yet the slave code of Africa, with slight modifications, was adopted as a part of the organic law of the United States, and it controlled the rights and duties of master and slave, and made that relation perpetual.

The interests of the people concerned in this peculiar government were left to their free control, and they accepted the invitation of nature to employ slave labor in the production of cotton and sugar, which at once became the most useful factors in the promotion of the civilization of the world. The result of this combination, in its benefits to the human family, is beyond the reach of computation. The race of white men who had control of these great powers, and united them in this wonderful work, had the will and energy requisite for the task, and the virtue to perform it with justice, tempered with an elevated Christian morality and benevolence, in gaining wealth for themselves and in lifting up the African slaves to higher mental, moral, and physical development.

Their work progressed without interruption as to their own purposes or conduct, and not a day passed that was not one of improvement in the condition of the negro race in the United States, or that did not increase the happiness of the slaves, or that did not make stronger and more gentle the sense of their mutual attachment and friendship, and that did not modify the rigors of the African slave code—the law of the negro race—that was then held and enforced in the land of their origin, and is the law of that country to this day.

When the books are opened in which are recorded all the benevolent works of all the Christian missions of modern times, it will be seen that the greatest of these was wrought under the Constitution of the United States by the slaveholders of the Southern States. Five generations of white people were moulded in their civilization by the indispensable work of adapting themselves and their local laws and social usages to the new conditions arising out of this system, thus established in the organic laws of the United States and incorporated in the foundations of all their institutions.

The slave code of Africa, which subordinated the liberty of the man to the will of the master, was the only law that these barbaric people could either understand or utilize. In the absence of that code, they had no law. The laws of the slaveholding States imposed restraints upon the power of the master as far as such restraints were consistent with necessary discipline; and, as the slaves advanced in adopting the usages, traits, and habits of civilized men, those laws were constantly modified to meet the new conditions.

The master was the natural friend of the slave, because his protection, instruction, and kindly treatment made the slave a more profitable and reliable servant. In the Southern States, that relation was in harmony with the moral and religious convictions of the entire body of the governing race. There was no dissent from this proposition, no doubt as to its beneficial results, and no misgivings as to its morality and justice. The relation of the master and slave, whether it came by inheritance or purchase, carried with it an authority, coupled with a responsibility, which devolved upon the master the exercise of great powers of government, and excited in him the truest sentiment of benevolence and forbearance—benevolence towards the poor and ignorant dependents upon the master's care for all that life was worth to them in comfort and human sympathy, and forbearance for the absence of native moral restraint, and for the ignorance that made them very difficult to train to usefulness, even in the plainest sorts of work.

Africa will feel it as a blessing for ages to come that these pioneers of a new, first step in civilization were placed under the guardianship of a people who were guided by a sense of duty that was chivalric in its demands upon their care, and was directed, in its execution, by the benign spirit of Christianity.

Nearly a century of such experiences worked the slavery system into the woof and warp of every industrial pursuit in the South, and was greatly influential in adapting the entire social system to the conditions created by the presence of negro slavery.

The negro race was held in subjection by the racial instinct of subordination and by caste, and by the slave code brought with them from Africa. The white race speculated on that situation financially and accumulated wealth, while they built up an insurmountable barrier to the social equality of the two races, on the lines that divine Providence had established.

The outcome of this peculiar situation was, naturally, the rapid growth of the dominant race in wealth. There came from it, also, a great development of the powers and faculty of government in the white race, and an aptitude for the use of such powers to meet all emergencies.

The master was lawgiver, judge, and ruler, within certain wide limits of restraint that were prescribed by the State, and, while he was held to answer for any abuse of his authority, he was, in a large sense, a discretionary autocrat. Leaving to the judgment of contemporaries and succeeding generations the question of the benefits derived from the negro slaves by the exercise of these peculiar powers, I may well say that the fact that their owners became an extraordinary people is not to be truthfully denied.

The Southern country was beautiful, salubrious, fertile, and fruitful in almost everything that is needed for the support of great populations and for the purposes of the highest civilization. It was possessed of large tracts of land and opened up into plantations ranging from hundreds to thousands of acres. Men without wealth, but of respectable parentage and family connections, found in these conditions the strongest inducements for agricultural pursuits. They soon acquired wealth, which was not confined to favored social classes, for almost the entire white population of the South felt the spur of this great opportunity and used it with untiring industry. A great number of homes were established, which were the abodes of comfort, each separated from the others by broad acres of cultivated lands, and all the people were in generous rivalry as to the elegance and even luxury of their homes and their appointments and surroundings. No country ever possessed happier and more desirable homes than this Southland. They were the abodes of hospitality, refinement, and elegance. Very many of the families thus built up in solid comfort and financial independence were descended from farmers of very moderate means who were accustomed to toil and were trained to industry and frugality on their small and profitless farms farther to the North, and among the American people no more virtuous and patriotic sires than these progenitors of the Southern people ever existed.

The increase of wealth among the agriculturists in the slave States, while it was rapid, had none of the inflation that attends speculative ventures in other pursuits. It was a solid, uniform growth. The most marked result of this era was the growth and improvement of the successive generations in education and refinement. The sons and daughters of these families had the leisure to attend colleges and schools at home and abroad, and possessed the means of acquiring every useful and elegant accomplishment. This sort of progress became a social requirement, along with the physical development, which resulted from leading very active lives in the open air. The men of the South were active, resolute, hardy, and adventurous, and the women, accustomed to the practical duties of domestic life, were strong, courageous, refined, and elevated in their tastes and manners. Their highest aim was the perfect discharge of religious duty. In all the history of the human race there has never appeared a nobler race of people than those who dominated the slaveholding States. The fruits of their labor established their title to this high rank, whatever of criticism they may have suffered, based upon mere sentimentalism. Enough has been here stated to outline the conditions which produced these results, and to show that such results were the actual and blessed fruits of a mission connected with the lifting up of barbaric slaves into the "full stature" of men, and the bringing them into the light of a true Christianity and of a civilization the blessings of which, we hope, are imperishable.

That time has now passed, those conditions have ceased, that mission is accomplished, and in the future it will be impossible that any part of this history can be repeated. That era closed with a mighty conflict of arms, the like of which, we believe, can never occur again on this continent or in the United States under any circumstances. It is certain that no such race of men as were compelled to accept defeat in that struggle can ever again be assembled and united in a common cause relating to our internal dissensions. There are survivors of that conflict who, with their offspring, still counted by millions, are not touched with degeneracy, nor have their children rejected the conceptions of right and duty for which their fathers fought, nor do they censure or lament the spirit of their ancestors in their resistance to the wrongs which they believed it was their duty to resent. But the history of that era is forever closed, and it only remains to be written.

Genealogy, if it is intended to summarize the highest stages of human action and endeavor, and to point out the origin, rise, and culmination of the noblest men who have served in the works of Christianity and civilization, can well begin the lesson with the introduction of African slavery into these colonies. It will not end with the emancipation of legal slavery, because there are new problems evolved from that event, which call into requisition the governing power, the self-control, the courage, the wisdom, and the benevolence which made the period of slavery, and the men who controlled it, so conspicuous in American history. These men of the South still hold a relation to the emancipated slaves that no other people are prepared to deal with; which requires of them the exercise of the power to govern, in the communities where the negroes reside in great numbers, under conditions of extreme delicacy and embarrassment. They have lost the master's power of personal control over the former slaves, and their relation to the African race is deprived of its former moral influence, by race antagonisms that are beyond the control of law or reason. They are now left to the control of general laws, many of which the negroes cannot even comprehend. Their mission of civilizing the negro, through slavery, is ended, and it must now give way to the more difficult task of protecting society and the State against the most dangerous enemy that was ever fastened by the power of the organic law upon the body politic, or billeted upon the homes of the people. That enemy is the voting and law-making power, given over to the control of an ignorant mass of ex-slaves, who belong to a race that is socially and politically irreconcilable to their former owners.

Having redeemed the savage negro from his natural bondage, and raised him to the dignity of a Christian man, the former slaveholders have spent more than a century of time and labor, with all its accumulations, in this work, and are forced to live with him and deal with him on equal terms as to civil and political rights, and on a common level of poverty. During all this time of necessary contact with slavery, through the providence of God, these generations of slaveholders were always true to the great principles of political and religious liberty, that shone as brightly in the first dawn of civilization in North America as it afterwards did in the zenith of its marvellous light and glory. In all principles, all enterprises, all wars and suffering, in all tests of devotion to the American creed of constitutional liberty, they were outspoken, faithful, bold, courageous, and true.

From this stock of immigrants from all European nations, thus associated with African slavery, came the prosperous millions, who proved themselves worthy of their ancestral blood, in the great war between the States by which slavery was abolished.

To trace the genealogy of the representative men of this race as far as possible, should be a grateful task to the present generation of Southern people. Besides, this is a special duty, because generations yet to come will recur to the history of these men with anxious care, to trace it through their blood and lineage, as well as through their labors and achievements.

In the history of all people there is an epoch from which biography and genealogy take their dates, as if it were a new classification of men that was then organized or had then assumed a new relation towards the world. This natural limit to genealogical research corresponds with the fact that there are stages of progress in the history of civilization that are marked by great events, which become the sources of new influence that work great changes in the condition of the human family.

The colonization of North America, the Revolution of 1776, and the Civil War of 1860, are the American eras from which we reckon the most useful facts of genealogy. But the sons of our Southern ancestry have still a more worthy duty and opportunity of establishing, in all proper detail of statement, the genealogy of those who were set apart by a higher power as the guardians of the slaves brought to our shores through the cupidity of men and nations to whom they were strangers.

Whatever motives or inducements may have influenced the creation of this new relation of master and slave in our country, the great truth is undeniable that, in the aggregate of its work, the world has never witnessed such an example of true benevolence, or any effort that can be compared with it, in lifting millions of human beings from the lowest depths of degradation into light and knowledge and the enjoyment of the benefits of the highest forms of civilization. It did not require the wisdom or heroism of conspicuous men to accomplish these results, and no especially great names appear to be entitled to any unusual credit for them. It was the work of millions of people, through many generations. The tree of the Southern Confederacy is not merely a family tree. There is grafted into it a scion from almost every family in the South and in the North, derived from many nations, each adding to its glory. The flowering of this tree will delight the future generations of both hemispheres, and its fruits will be for the nurture of civilization and "the healing of the nations" in the darkest places of the world. It should be the care of this generation to add to this tree every twig, however small, that has in it "the savor of the true vine."

The slaveholding class in the United States have contributed to their history a great number of the foremost men who have served the country in its highest councils and upon its most renowned battle fields. Of the twenty-three persons who have served as President of the United States, ten were slaveholders. George Washington, Andrew Jackson, and Robert E. Lee were slaveholders, and they represent, typically, the military prowess and heroism of the periods in which they served.

On the Supreme Court bench the slaveholding families of the United States furnished such illustrious judges as Marshall, Taney, and Campbell, with many others.

In statesmanship, Calhoun, Clay, and Berrien were leading men in a great host of eminent gentlemen in both houses of Congress.

Twenty-six of the Senators now representing thirteen States were slaveholders thirty years ago. In every department of theology, literature, art, and science this family of American people has furnished men of great abilities.

The Southrons of to-day are worthy sons of noble sires, with minds and hearts broadened and liberalized by the results of the terrible conflict of arms which deluged the Southland with the blood of her best citizens. They love the South for her sunny skies, her broad fields, and her fertile soil; for her chivalric manhood and Christian civilization; and, above all else, for her grand and beautiful women, and for the green graves of the men who wore the gray and died for her honor.

Her civic officers are found in the front rank of the Governors and high officials of the States, and her statesmen are among the most capable and fearless in the highest councils of the nation. They occupy an elevated plane far above race prejudice and sectional fanaticism, and their lofty patriotism and broad sense of justice are coextensive with the boundaries of the American Union. Thomas G. Jones is a fair type of the one and John T. Morgan of the other—both Alabamians. As Governor of Alabama, the former promptly called into action the full force of the military arms of the State to protect the lives and liberties of the much despised negro miners, who were being outraged and murdered by their white collaborators in the mines. The latter were not Southern born men, but foreigners to our soil, who came upon us from sections north of the Ohio River.

Thomas G. Jones has a national reputation as a true representative of the chivalry, brains, and the blue blood of the South. He is in character the veritable Chevalier Bayard of our times—sans peur et sans reproche. His public career will leave an imprint upon our State and people which will work out beneficial results long after he has taken his place in the silent camping ground of the Confederate dead.

Senator John T. Morgan is, par excellence, the foremost statesman of America. He is thus regarded in the great countries of Europe, as well as in all the American States. He is a superb specimen of the Southern statesman, and history will record his name on the front page set apart for the greatest publicists and constitutional lawyers of the present century.

I have not the space to individualize the many other great men of the South, but content myself with holding up for the admiration of posterity two of the most prominent representatives of Southern chivalry and statesmanship of our generation—Governor Thomas G. Jones and Senator John T. Morgan.

The slaveholding era in the history of our country closed thirty years ago. Our fathers need no defense upon the moral question of slavery; time will vindicate them. The present generation has no apology to make for the construction that the South placed upon the Constitution. She had a right to construe it. Southern statesmen predominated in the convention that promulgated and adopted it.

The chief executive office of the United States was held for many years by Presidents who were Southern born gentlemen, and who shaped the policy of the government.

Whether the South was right or wrong, the Constitution was finally construed upon the bloody fields of battle, and she accepted the result, and has remained loyal to the Union ever since the Civil War.

To her younger sons it is gratifying to know that their ancestors have transmitted both their institutions and their blood to the present generation in the greatest degree of purity. Statistics are cold facts, but they are convincing to an unprejudiced mind. We have only to point to the present census of the United States to prove to you that the Southern people are the only true descendants of our Anglo-Saxon American ancestors. To-day the percentage of foreign-born voters, as compared to the native-born American voters, is very small in the following thirteen Southern States: In Texas, the percentage is 14; Florida, 11; Louisiana, 10; Kentucky, 7; West Virginia, 5; Virginia, 3; Arkansas, 3; Tennessee, 3; Alabama 2.50; Georgia, 2; South Carolina, .61. By way of comparison, I shall present a few States from the East and the West, in many of which the foreign-born are in majority. The percentage of foreign-born voters, as compared with the native-born American voters, in the State of New York is 38.73; Illinois, 36.39; Michigan, 40.22; California, 50.21; Nevada, 51.41; Wisconsin, 59.92; Minnesota, 58.55; North Dakota, 64.89. When we read these figures we are reminded of the undeniable truth that, whatever remains of the original purity of our American institutions, and of our American ancestral blood, can be found to exist only in the Southern States. Well may we be called a noble, patriotic, chivalrous, distinctive, homogeneous people.

Whatever may have been lost of the traditions of our illustrious ancestors, there yet lives in the breast of every Anglo-Saxon Southerner the sacred, traditional "word of honor." With them this can never die. In the present typical families of the South the youths are taught first the creed of their religion, and around their mothers' knees they are familiarized with the traditional “word of honor.” The mother’s argument is more conclusive and powerful than the decision of any court of last appeals in the land.

Recently an article appeared in The Forum upon the subject of “Student Honor and College Examinations” which shows a thorough investigation of the tone of honor among students in American colleges. This investigation was made by Professor Stevens. He propounded questions to forty-three leading American institutions, and received information from forty-two of them. He says: “There are many young persons who have no conception of the obligation implied in a ‘word of honor.’ Such a conception is not innate, but rather a product of culture. The moral sense needs direction and cultivation. The current standard of honor is, to a large extent, arbitrary, an outcome of popular sentiment, and hence liable to change with the growth of civilization. . . . In Southern colleges generally the traditional standard of honor in the examination room is very exacting. College honor is largely the outcome of tradition. It is to be hoped that Southern colleges will never give up a tradition so creditable as the honor system.”

After this very thorough examination, the inference to be drawn is that there is more honor among Southern boys than among any other American students. This has always been true, and will ever remain so as long as the South continues purely American.

The first desire that a Southern student has is to place himself upon the record of honor as the worthy descendant of a noble ancestor.

The sons of the South are to-day guarding the cherished sentiment of honor, which has been transmitted to them through tradition, as zealously as did their Revolutionary fathers.

Man may have the inherent desire to do right, but if his higher sensibilities are not directed and cultivated, he will sink to the level of the community in which he lives. His life is governed, and his character formed, by the circumstances which surround him. When we look around us and see the discontent which exists among the American people, we are forcibly reminded of the fact that local and individual interests are held paramount to that of national pride and national honor.

If the light of day first shone upon you from the silvery heights of Colorado, the white metal will probably control your financial views; if the palatial homes of Wall Street claim your birthplace, your social and political views will be governed by the standard gold; if you were born beneath the blue heavens of a beautiful Southland, you will learn to love and to measure all social, moral, and political institutions by the high standard of Southern honor, and the benign spirit of Christianity. When the genealogist shall have summarized the deeds of all the leading actors of the present day, in the great struggle for supremacy of individual, class, and sectional interest, and the historian shall have blended these actions into one great work, it will furnish an interesting and profound study for coming generations.

Let me not forget to say that the women of the South are interested in the preservation of the records of our people. With lofty pride they may point to their genealogies—to family histories crowded with brilliant deeds. In the Mammoth Cave there is said to be a chamber where stalactites are ever luminous; so, ever in the darkest hours of struggle and disaster, the daughters of our sunny region have preserved and exhibited a purity, a loveliness, a composure, an heroic spirit, that will elicit the admiration of the most distant ages.

The war for Southern independence affords a starting point for the heralding of “the New South,” and the descendants of the heroes of “the Lost Cause” will need no heraldic crest to emblazon their escutcheon other than their lineage from ancestors who wore the gray.

Let our children learn the story,
And that story e'er defend;
Let them know their fathers' glory
Dying for the rights of men;
Let them never feel dishonored
When they hear them “rebels” named!
Of Lee and all our peerless braves
They can never be ashamed.

The genealogy of the Southern people may well begin anew with the muster roll of “the Lost Cause,” and the stamp of nobility will rest upon the brow of every worthy descendant of the soldiers of "the Conquered Banner," while in ages to come the spirit of "the priest poet" will continue to sing:

Yes, give me the land where the ruins are spread,
And the living tread light on the hearts of the dead;
Yes, give me a land that is blest by the dust
And bright with the deeds of the down-trodden just;
Yes, give me the land where the battles' red blast
Has flashed to the future the fame of the past;
Yes, give me the land that has legends and lays
That tell of the memories of long vanished days;
Yes, give me the land that has story and song
Enshrining the strife with the wrong;
Yes, give me the land with a grave in each spot,
And names on the graves that shall not be forgot;
Yes, give me the land of the wreck and the tomb—
There is grandeur in graves, there is glory in gloom;
For out of the gloom future brightness is born,
And the graves of the dead, with the grass overgrown,
May yet form the footstool of liberty's throne,
And each single wreck in the warpath of might
'Shall yet be a rock in the temple of right.

INTRODUCTION.

The Prude- Proud- Prood families of England and France have been known to have occupied prominent positions in the Courts of both Countries, and the early days of Civilization have been filled with mystery as to the how, why, when, where and who. As we of a younger generation have come into our own we are beginning to foster more and more interest in the doings of our forebears, especially since they have been known to have been associated with the development of a great civilization such as theirs of the 16th. and 17th. centuries.

The history of France had its beginning in the 5th. century with the conquest of Transalpine Gaul by the Franks, a Gotho-Germanic tribe which settled in the country and gave it its name—France; but the country was before the conquest inhabited by three tribes, namely; the Belgians who inhabited the land in the north and east, the Celts in the west and central portion, and the Aquitanians who made their homes in the south; thus we have authoritative data that our ancestors were of Celtic origin, living in France and enjoying a legal existence in the French monarchy, a right secured to them through the Edict of Nantes in 1598 issued by Henry IV of France, but the Edict was revoked by Louis XIV of France in 1685 and with this went out from France 50,000 Huguenots and Protestants who refugeed into England, Germany and the United States.

According to Bardsley, John Prude with some other members of his immediate family were in Bucks Co. England in 1273—John Prute and Christian le Prute were recorded there in or about the same time—John Prood was listed as a citizen, but it may have been that the original ancestors had emigrated to England earlier than the 14th. century.

Many of these refugees became loyal English citizens—and enjoyed the privileges of English citizens, but a great desire for freedom of worship became paramount in their minds—and they sought other lands where they were accorded the right to worship as they saw fit. To them, America gave this great privilege, and moved by this great purpose, our ancestors came from London and Manchester, England, and settled at Charleston, South Carolina, later moving on into Laurens District, South Carolina in 1770, and settling near Enoree River. They were later holders of large lands as shown by deeds of 1823—recorded in the deed books of Laurens District, South Carolina.

The Prude family or tribe has been clearly defined in the annals of history. In the earliest period there were no surnames, each family, clan or tribe choosing its name from some quality or trait which was well qualified to be the name of a great family—and so the name in the early history of the nation came to be spelled Proud, Prood- Prud, which means a good prudent, proud, modest man, according to lexicographers.

The name Prud-homme became Anglicized and we find in different sections of England the name Prud-Prood-Proud and Prude, but in France today there are found families who still hold to Prud-homme, for it is certain that our ancestors were French and that the name is French from the early family or tribe of Transalpine Gaul.

Each family in England had its own Coat-of-Arms and the Arms of the Prude- Proud- Prood family was painted by Rouge Dragon in 1697 and presented at the Heraldic Visitations of Kent. This, too, is authoritative. But due to the rumors of war in Europe this year, 1939, the Coat-of-Arms has never been received.

In 1723 we find John Prude in Bucks County, England, enjoying the privileges of an English citizen. He was married to Lady Martha, a lady in waiting to her royal highest, the Queen. To them were born several children. John Prude, Jr., was born in London, England in 1768 and William Prude was born in 1774, October 15.

This well-to-do family settled in Laurens District, where they cleared the land and began their sojourn in America, the land of freedom. It was here in South Carolina that we find records of deeds of grants of lands from father to son, thus beginning a long journey for the descendants of our French-English ancestry down to the 9th. and 10th. generations of their posterity.

An illustrious line of ancestors to brighten the pages of history for those who are interested in knowing that they are of the purest stock, without an intermixing of the races for their ancestors have left behind them, "Footprints on the sands of Time."

THE FIRST PRUDE FAMILY IN AMERICA — 1770.

Our Prude ancestry in America can be traced back to John Prude, Sr., who was the son of John Prude and Lady Margaret of England. John Prude, Sr. came to America in 1770 and settled in Charleston, South Carolina. While his services in the Revolutionary War are traditional, there are facts which lead us to believe that they are authentic.

John Prude, Sr. moved to Laurens District, South Carolina in 1770 with his wife, Mary and his two sons, John Prude, Jr. and William Prude.

The deeds which are on record in Book B, p. 97 in Laurens District, South Carolina, point to the fact that John Prude, Sr. of America was a very wealthy land owner and the fact that these lands were deeded by John Prude, Sr. at the age of 82 to his son, John Prude, Jr., as early as 1805, shows that he had secured very early after his arrival here from England in 1770, possessions which were valuable.

FIRST GENERATION IN AMERICA.

1st. Gen.

PRUDE

JOHN PRUDE, SR., b. 1723, was a large land holder. He married Mary, a lady whose standing was unquestionable.

To John Prude, Sr. and his wife, Mary, were born the following children, to-wit;

- I. John Prude, Jr., b. 1768; d. 1817. (Mrs. I. W. McAdory's grandfather).
- II. William Prude, b. Oct. 15, 1774; d. Jan. 8, 1833. (J. O. Prude, Sr.'s grandfather).

SECOND GENERATION.

2nd. Gen. 1st. Child.

John Prude, Sr.-wife, Mary 1.

JOHN PRUDE, JR., b. in London, England, 1768; died in 1817 in Warren County, Tennessee. He came to America with his father in 1770, where John Prude, Sr. settled on the Enoree River near Columbia, as shown by deeds recorded in Book B, page 97, Laurens District, South Carolina, Sept. 3, 1805, also Sept. 4, 1779.

This pioneer family lived in Laurens District, South Carolina, until 1806, when they moved on into North Carolina and settled in Buncombe County; thence into Tennessee and on into Jefferson County, where they located near Nabor's Spring, not far from Old Elyton, Alabama.

John Prude, Jr. bought and settled on the plantation which was afterwards owned by Thomas Lightfoot Williams and later by James Moore.

John Prude, Jr. married Margaret Whitmore, b. Nov. 22, 1774; d. April 22, 1856, in Laurens District, South Carolina. She is buried in Bucksville Cemetery, Tuscaloosa County, Alabama. Her father was John Whitmore, who was killed in the Revolutionary War, and her mother was Alice Garrett of South Carolina. John Whitmore died, leaving his wife with five young daughters and one negress (slave). After her five daughters were married, Alice (Garrett) Whitmore married a Mr. Young. There were no children by this marriage. Alice (Garrett) Whitmore is buried at Bucksville.

Margaret Whitmore was affectionately known as "Aunt Peggy" Prude, a woman of high standing, who was very active, a good business woman who took upon herself the task of personally directing the slaves and her own household.

To Margaret (Whitmore) Prude and John Prude, Jr. were born the following children, to-wit;

- I. Joshua Prude, b. May 22, 1795, Laurens District, South Carolina. He died in infancy.
- II. Mary Prude, b. Jan. 12, 1797.
- III. Lydia Prude, b. Jan. 12, 1799; died in infancy.
- IV. *Jonathan Prude, b. Feb. 22, 1801.
- V. *David Prude, b. Feb. 22, 1801; d. Oct. 22, 1864, Laurens District, South Carolina.
- VI. Alice Prude, b. May 4, 1803, Laurens District.
- VII. Anna Prude, b. Dec. 25, 1805, Laurens District.

*Jonathan Prude and David Prude were twins.

- VIII. Sarah Prude, b. May 6, 1808, in Buncombe County, North Carolina.
- IX. Margaret Prude, b. July 15, 1810; d. April 3, 1850, Buncombe.
- X. William Prude, b. Dec. 27, 1812, Buncombe County.
- XI. John Prude, b. Oct. 22, 1816; died in infancy.
- XII. Martha Prude, b. March 31, 1818 in Jefferson County, Alabama, after the death of her father.

2nd. Gen. 2nd. Child.

John Prude, Sr.-wife, Mary, 1.

WILLIAM PRUDE I, was born Oct. 15, 1774; d. Jan. 8, 1833. William Prude was a farmer, and a slave owner. He settled in the woods (forest), cleared land and built a hewn log house located on the Huntsville Road, north of McCalla Station, in 1815. This house is still standing and in good condition. He was one of the earliest settlers of Jefferson County residing in the Jones Valley District, according to a record in "Tuscaloosa—The Origin of its Name—Its History, etc." by Thomas Maxwell, dated July 1, 1876, p. 50, and was recorded among the papers of the Alabama Historical Society.

In 1819 William Prude was appointed by William Bibb, Governor of Alabama, one of the (3) three Commissioners to select the place for the Jefferson County site. With the other two, they selected Elyton, Alabama, which has since become a part of Birmingham. The State Papers in Montgomery certify to this fact. William Prude married Sarah Garrett, b.; d. July 18, 1822, at the old home on the Huntsville Road 1½ miles north of McCalla Station in Jefferson County, and his wife, Sarah Garrett is buried in the Moore Graveyard, not far from the house in which they lived and which was built by William Prude in 1815. To Sarah Garrett and William Prude were born the following children, to-wit;

- I. John Prude, b. Sept. 12, 1793; d. July 18, 1822.
- II. Joseph Prude, b. Sept. 9, 1795.
- III. J. Hanan Prude, b. Oct. 9, 1797.
- IV. Elisha Prude, b. Sept. 5, 1799; d. July 20, 1804.
- V. Hannah Prude, b. March 3, 1801.
- VI. Mary "Polly" Prude, b. Jan. 25, 1803; d. Oct. 5, 1882.

VII. Daniel Prude, b. Nov. 18, 1804.

VIII. Rebecca Prude, b. March 5, 1814; d. Jan. 28, 1891.

William Prude married a second time. His second wife was Celia McAshan, b. Jan. 17, 1782 in Buckingham County, Virginia, five miles from Ca Ira, Virginia. She, Celia McAshan, was the widow of Thos. McAdory I, by whom she had five McAdory children, to-wit;

I. James McAdory, b. Sept. 14, 1802, on Turkey Creek in South Carolina; he died Dec. 2, 1871.

II. Robert McAdory, b. Nov. 6, 1808, in South Carolina; d. Dec. 10, 1837.

III. Chambers McAdory, b. Oct. 5, 1810; d. April 14, 1834.

IV. Mary McAdory, b. Dec. 17, 1812; d. Sept. 1835.

V. Thos. McAdory II, b. June 15, 1817 in Christian County, Kentucky; d. June 28, 1874.

Thos. McAdory I, died and left Celia McAshan McAdory, a widow. She had come with her father, Nehemiah McAshan, to South Carolina, where she met and married Thos. McAdory. In 1823 she married William Prude at Pleasant Hill, Jefferson County, Alabama.

William Prude I, and Celia McAshan had only one child born to them, namely;

I. William Wellington Prude I, (my father) b. Jan. 31, 1824. He was the link which united the McAdory and Prude families, having eight half sisters and brothers on the Prude side and five half brothers and sisters on the McAdory side of the family. He was born $1\frac{1}{2}$ miles north of McCalla, Jefferson County. The next year his father, William Prude I, and his mother, Celia (McAshan) Prude, moved from Jefferson County to land purchased by him in Section 26, Township 20, Range 12 West, twelve miles west of Tuscaloosa on the Columbus Road, where William Prude, Sr., established a large cattle ranch, beyond him in the Sipsey River bottoms. He was interested in this industry until his death, Jan. 8, 1833.

William Prude I, is buried at the Big Creek Baptist Church, six miles west of Northport, on the Columbus Road, Tuscaloosa, Alabama.

Celia (McAshan) Prude, the second wife, went with her son, William Wellington Prude I, then only nine years old, back to Pleasant Hill, within one hundred and fifty yards of Old Pleasant Hill Church on the Alabama Great Southern Railroad. She, Celia (McAshan) Prude is buried in the McAdory Graveyard near Old Jonesboro, Alabama.

WILLIAM WELLINGTON PRUDE I, b. Jan. 31, 1824. He was the only child of William Prude and Celia (McAshan) McAdory who was the widow of Thomas McAdory. He was only 3 years of age when he was given a deed of gift by his father, William Prude, to two (2) negro boys, Henry and Alfred. This deed is recorded in Jefferson County, Alabama, Record Book 2, page 152, dated March 13, 1826. Another deed of gift was given him of four (4) negroes, Mary and her 3 daughters—Priscilla, Minerva and Lucretia. This deed is recorded in Tuscaloosa County, April 12, 1832, Record Book A, pages 515-516, Probate Office, Tuscaloosa. These were deeds of gift recorded.

A United States Government Land Grant Patent to 80 acres was given to William Wellington Prude I by the President of the United States, Andrew Jackson and is signed in Jackson's own handwriting—1832, Jan. 10.

William Wellington Prude I was only seventeen years old when his mother died. He went to live with his half brother and guardian, Colonel Jas. McAdory. He was placed in the Jake Baker school at Jonesboro, Alabama, for (4) four years, receiving an education as good as any to be had anywhere at that time.

William Wellington Prude I was a large planter, and owned a great deal of property in lands and slaves. He held political office for a number of years as a member of the Commissioners Court, for Tuskaloosa County. A copy of this Commission follows:

The State of Alabama
Executive Department
Montgomery, Alabama.

I, Thomas H. Watts, Governor of the State of Alabama, hereby certify that W. W. Prude is a County Commissioner in Tuskaloosa County, an office created by the laws of the State and necessary for the proper administration of the State Government.

In Testimony whereof I have hereunto set my hand this 3rd. day of May, A.D. 1864 and caused the great seal of the State to be affixed.

(Signed) T. H. WATTS.

By the Governor,
P. H. Britton,
Secretary of State.

William Wellington Prude I was with the Quarter Master Division of the Confederate States of America, and his services covered the entire Civil War period from 1856-1868. He was a great benefactor to the Confederate Cause, engaging in manufacturing shoes and clothing for the Government of the Confederate States, to supply the Southern soldiers. When the slaves were emancipated at the close of the War Between the States he owned 75 slaves, many of whom chose to remain with their master.

William Wellington Prude I was a Methodist, a member of the Masonic Lodge of Tuscaloosa, having been "Raised to the Sublime Degree of Master Mason, May 25, 1865." A member of the Rising Virtue Lodge No. 4, Tuscaloosa, Alabama. In 1866 he was elected by the largest popular vote of the people of Tuscaloosa County, as a member of the Board of Revenue.

William Wellington Prude I was married July 21, 1844, to Lucretia Eliza Owen, a daughter of one of the South's ablest citizens. She was born in Birmingham, Alabama, Aug. 31, 1823, in the Owen home which stood on the site of the present Louisville and Nashville Railway Station. She was the daughter of Thomas Owen and Mary Eliza Elmore of Cotton Gin Port, Monroe County, Mississippi.

William Wellington Prude I and his wife, Lucretia Eliza (Owen) after their marriage came back to Jefferson County, Alabama to establish and build a home. They purchased the land including the "Glenn Springs," just west of the City of Bessemer, and there they built their first home. Their two oldest children, Mary and Thos. Owen Prude, were born at this place. They came then to Tuscaloosa County, Alabama in 1848 and purchased land near Tuscaloosa, Ala. The residence was located on the northeast quarter, Sec. 34, Town. 21, Range 9 West. Here two of their children were born, and J. O. Prude, Sr., was born on the plantation which is today one of the few ante-bellum plantations still held by a son of the owner during ante-bellum days—"Owenwood," the beautiful country estate of William Wellington Prude's youngest child, James Oscar Prude, Sr.

To William Wellington Prude I, and Lucretia Eliza (Owen) were born the following children, to-wit;

- I. Mary Eliza Prude, b. Aug. 28, 1845; d. March 8, 1886.
- II. Thomas Owen Prude, b. July 9, 1847; d. Nov. 5, 1864.

THOS. L. WILLIAMS, b. Nov. 17, 1831, d. Jan. 17, 1876. He was married 3 times. He was educated in Jefferson County Schools. He was a large land owner and slave owner. He operated a tannery on an extensive scale and was truly public spirited, being one of the most popular young men in his community.

Thos. L. Williams was a member of the Pleasant Hill Methodist Church (near McCalla) which his grandmother, Margaret Whitmore Prude, founded. He lived on his big plantation near McCalla and later bought his grandmother's land after her death. He was not sent to the front during war because he was considered of more value to the Government at that time, being engaged in operating a furnace a mile south of Tannehill station where he made bullets for ammunition, and his tannery was turned over to the Government for the making of leather goods for the Confederate soldiers.

He never ran for office, but was Justice of the Peace from his early youth to the time of his death.

His life was suddenly cut off at 44 years of age, when killed in Birmingham, though he was never known to have had an enemy.

Thos. L. Williams married (1) Matura Turner McAdory, Dec. 18, 1850. To this union were born the following children, to-wit;

- I. Jesse Williams, b. Oct. 14, 1851; died when 22 years of age.

ISAAC WELLINGTON McADORY—

Isaac Wellington McAdory and Pleasant Hill Academy

By James Oscar Prude, Sr.

INTRODUCTION

Tonight, I am passing through memory into Dreamland. Enraptured views from my vision rise. I am on my journey to pay homage to my Mecca—old "Pleasant Hill Academy," a preparatory school which boys and girls attended, that they might enter for graduation from the highest institutions of learning in the land.

I want to listen to the chimes of the old school bell. I want to see again that old Church on the hill, the cleanly swept country church-yard: the beautiful undulating grounds beneath the giant oaks, where Dryads would choose to dwell and the pools of water from flowing streams hard-by where Naiads would love to sport. Yes, let me kneel and quaff once more from the old Pierian Spring the waters of learning, where it is best to "drink deep or drink not at all," "a little learning is a dangerous thing."

The laughing children were in gleeful sport, all merry as if it were a May-day celebration; and the old Professor, God bless him!

I attended this preparatory school three long scholastic years—the first year I slept in the same room with him in the home of Major Thomas McAdory; the second year I slept in the same room with him in the home of Mr. Thomas H. Owen; and the third year I slept in the same bed with him in the home of Mr. W. J. Bass.

After having completed the work here I said to him, "I am now through, I am going to work." He replied, "No, you are going to graduate from the University of Alabama, as your kin have done." I obeyed, I graduated in 1876.

Like a pebble dropped in the source of a fountain rivulet, changing the course of a great mountain stream of life, so his reply directed my thought into the paths of future pleasure, profit, and happiness, for which I am today paying him humble tribute, and everlasting gratitude for having pointed out the way to a higher and more worthy life.

I mention these facts in order to keep fresh in memory the many pleasant moments passed as teacher and pupil, which bind tighter as the years swiftly pass.

He married, in the Spring when the lovely flowers were blooming, Alice Eulalia Sadler, May 4th, 1874. She was a graduate from the Tuscaloosa Female College, and a member of the Faculty of that Institution. A happy marriage of gentle people of noble birth.

There is a marked differentiation in the trend of thought which leads the mind into the fields of research for facts upon which to build monuments to the great men of the world. On the one hand, the close personal contact, and association of friends; on the other hand, to use materials exhumed from the mouldering ashes of the age, is quite different.

Thucydides, the greatest historian of his age could not have chained the civilization of the ancient people to the link of modern science, art, literature, had it not been for the friendship, love and devotion of his contemporary Pericles, which is shown to a marked degree in his biography of his associate.

Lord Tennyson at a modern date was happy in saying: Arthur Hallam inspired him to give to the world, "In Memoriam." Hallam died at the age of twenty-two.

Early Ancestry

Isaac Wellington McAdory has an authentic line of descent from his immigrant ancestors into the United States of America. His paternal forefathers were of Scotch extraction with a strong splash of Irish blood, coming from Edinburgh and settling in Antrim, Ireland; thence to York County, So. Ca. This is as I have it from Mr. McAdorey in Ireland.

Thomas McAdory I, emigrated into Kentucky, thence into Alabama. Major Thomas McAdory III came to Pleasant Hill and while living there Isaac Wellington McAdory was born, Sept. 17, 1843, and died Aug. 31, 1922. He is buried within a stone's throw of his birthplace at Pleasant Hill.

His maternal ancestors were of pure Welsh stock, immigrating from Wales to the Virginia Colonies. The original Thomas Owen settled near Richmond. He had three sons, Thomas, John and William Owen.

Prof. Isaac Wellington McAdory was a descendant from the second brother, John Owen, and was of the 7th generation from the original immigrant, Thomas Owen I, father of John, the 2nd son.

His Elmore maternal ancestor was Peter the brother of Thomas Elmore who lived in New Kent County, Va. in 1698.

Thomas Owen and Peter Elmore belong to that class of opulent and well descended gentlemen to whom nothing was wanting of nobility, but the name. They were both large land owners, and slave holding families. Their interests were united by the marriage of Thomas Owen to Mary Eliza Elmore of South Carolina. The Elmores were Quakers. They were the grandparents of Prof. Isaac Wellington McAdory. Major Thomas McAdory was his father, and his mother was Emily Elmore Owen of Jefferson County, Alabama. They were his maternal ancestors, transmitting to him the dominant traits of character of the two families. The most indomitable will power backed by an invincible courage to put it into effect.

PIONEERS

David Owen, Thomas Owen, William Rose Sadler, William Prude, John Smith, John Moore, Thomas McAdory, Jesse Williams—

The descendants of these men, and many more were the builders and promoters of every worthy institution, mental and moral in Jefferson County, Alabama, during this early stage of education in the State. They were the men who built the old log-school houses, cleared the timber from the fields, and opened up the soil to grain, and the fleecy staple that they might manufacture clothes for their children, and for themselves. The descendants of these men built the old log school house at Pleasant Hill, and Bucksville, and old Salem Academy combined to form the populous community of Pleasant Hill Academy.

The descendants of these men were the students after the Civil War, who sat at the feet of Prof. Isaac Wellington McAdory as principal of Pleasant Hill Academy.

Old Salem was burned, but a new building rose on the east side of the valley Phoenix-like from her ashes to care for and protect her children under the guardianship of Prof. McAdory. He also moved old Bucksville's student body east to his thriving, growing school at Pleasant Hill Academy. This reaction followed the Civil War, and from 1866 to 1876 she had grown into a thrifty, populous community, a preparatory school which would rival any in the State of Alabama.

This Academy gave to the State more sons and daughters, who afterwards became college graduates in higher education than any preparatory school in the State of Alabama. It drew students from well descended gentlemen so well described by Lord Macauley in his History of England, when speaking of the Virginia and South Carolina Colonies. Many of these patrons had been stripped of their wealth during the Civil War, but Professor McAdory being a Confederate soldier himself said, "Come on, I will put you through." (Excuse me please). I happened to have been one of that number. I am now eighty-one years old, and I am due to him, my life long gratitude. I graduated from the University of Alabama in the Class of 1876, I am now one of the two oldest living graduates of the University. Dr. Samuel Minturn Peck was my classmate. I take this opportunity of doing honor to Prof. McAdory.

BIOGRAPHY

Let me give you of this plain, faithful, honest, upright, Christian gentleman, a short, clear, concise history of his benevolent life. He was true to his convictions, loyal to his friends; immovable in his religious faith; a man to whom tainted money and favored positions did not appeal. For the right he stood steadfast, unchangeable with an indomitable will so characteristic in the stock from which he came. He was so plain in manners, that it gave him true dignity in its very simplicity—"a real diamond in the rough."

This was the real man of whom I wish to speak, and a truer, more virtuous, nobler character has never graced the annals of any county, state or nation. He did not fear any man, but was polite and chivalrous under all circumstances.

Reconstruction

RETURN HOME—PAROLED

*"Through life some rain must fall,
Some days must be dark and dreary."*

On September 28th the clouds hung low, and the nocturnal winds had commenced to blow from the Virginia Capes. General Johnson had stacked arms, and the Southern soldiers were being paroled—Lee had surrendered his Army—the Southern Confederacy was a "Lost Cause." Down the highway was seen coming, with a slow but steady tread, a young Confederate Army Officer. His uniform was tattered and torn, his sleeve bore the insignia of his rank, though weather worn. As he approached he raised his hand and saluted the by-standers, it was Lieutenant Isaac Wellington McAdory returning from the battlefield.

At the beginning of the Civil War about four years to this date, three brothers enlisted, Thomas, Hennington and Wellington. The oldest was Thomas who died in the service, Hennington was shot through the head and died at Missionary Ridge, Wellington returned alone, sad and sorrow stricken. He sat down on the steps of his paternal home and wept for his brothers, and refused to be comforted because, "they were not."

What next? After the smoke of battle had cleared away, he arose to take his bearings. Perceptibly the conflict was over, but to be waged in a mysterious way which led to doubts and fears.

He stepped directly from the command of a company of soldiers in the Confederate Army into the Reconstruction of the Southern States of the United States under the most trying ordeal in the history of the American people.

Isaac Wellington McAdory was moral, just, and a Christian gentleman. He was intuitively a close observer and his astute brain never slept on Southern rights and Southern decency. He was courteous and chivalric to a fault. He had been approached by a committee of old slave owning patriarchs to organize for protection, for they had been instructed by the inside council, that General Robert E. Lee would sanction organization for "protection" only. These old patriarchs formed a solid background for that purpose. By some strange witchery a half dozen college boys organized on Dec. 24, 1865, a Ku Klux Klan. McAdory now stood as Lord Byron stood.

*"In Venice on the Bridge of Sighs
A palace and a prison on each hand."*

He was forced to choose between the good and the bad. He chose to cast his lot with his people. Professionally, he chose teaching; in politics he stood steadfast to States' Rights, the Constitution and Democracy, in mystery he chose the Klan, for the protection of white supremacy and the cultural civilization of the South. Not a drop of any man's blood stained his escutcheon. He acted under the sanction of General Lee, General N. B. Forrest, who was Commander-in-Chief of Klandom in the Cotton States in the South, General James H. Clanton of Montgomery and the late General John T. Morgan of the United States Senate. McAdory stood high in the Councils of Masonry in the State of Alabama.

The fabric of his life's work was so beautifully woven that to eliminate any one of its integral parts would be to destroy the fulfillment of its prophecy and dissolve the purpose of his life which could not do his memory honor.

Professor McAdory was a Civil War product and to write the history of his life in connection with his old Commanders, Lee, Forrest, and Morgan of Alabama, and leave out any one of the three chapters—Teacher, Reconstructionist, or Klansman, you had as well re-enact Shakespeare's "Hamlet" leaving Hamlet out. It cannot honorably be done, and make him live his life from 1865 to 1875—ten years of a perilous period. Nine-tenths of all the honorable, chivalric, white men in the Cotton States were Klansmen during that period in our Southern History. It was a disgrace, for any real red-blooded southerner whose character and age would admit him, not to belong to that secret order.

The curtain of darkness was lifted and the horrors, and the tragedies of that ten years of Reconstruction were exposed to light. To be honest with yourself, with your country and with God, you are compelled to speak the truth, to speak a half truth, is to speak a lie. Prof. McAdory taught his students to tell the truth.

CARPET-BAG RULE

This was 1865, negroes emancipated, States' Rights flaunted to the wind, federal soldiers made arrests at every turn for disobedience, and writs of habeas corpus were denied, every indignity hurled upon old soldiers who were back home on parole. The time was ripe for anything which would save the white women from the insulting conduct, and criminal assaults.

The community had three high places to be filled by one man, the best and safest man, the most resolute, a man governed by honest judgment, backed by an indomitable will to do right. To fill these three high places in the community, McAdory was chosen.

Professor McAdory had more power and authority in his hands than any man in Jefferson County. He was the Grand Cyclops of his realm. His word was law unto his people.

He had been thoroughly disciplined and was a seasoned soldier. Army life developed his physical strength and endurance. During Reconstruction of the Southern States into the Union, tact and skill were necessary to handle the situation. It was a matter which required a real artisan; the highest order of intelligence, confidence, and honesty, with a strong moral background were needed to control, direct, and grapple with its menacing power and deadly influence. The Klan was an organization which could do more good or more harm than any secret order placed in the hands of a wicked, unscrupulous, designing set of politicians, an organization to sway the ignorant negro voters, to do their bidding—(to wash their dirty linen).

It is a dangerous experiment to place too much power in one man's hands. He will soon become a menace to society and to good government, and end in despotic ruin on the one hand, or he will become an instrument for good, for the protection of orderly homes, for the betterment of society, for the maintenance and upbuilding of our religious institutions, the basis of our southern civilization, and broadening of our liberties. This is the very foundation of our civilization.

I will cite two cases which were inspired by the purest thought, noblest purpose, on the one hand, and to prevent barbarous assaults, murder, rape on the other. I was a student here at Pleasant Hill at that time. Peace reigned with silent dignity afterwards.

Prof. McAdory did not participate in the first case. He passed the night pleasantly at home—in fact, not a single Klansman in Jefferson County was present.

Klans in those days were not intended for trouble, they were promoters of peace, they were for white supremacy as opposed to social equality. It was only when thugs, mixed-breeds, carpet-baggers and scalawags commenced to capitalize on the Klan, and use it for political purposes, that it went into disrepute; and to protect the name, General Forrest disbanded the order.

Now, here is a typical case of Klansmanship, white men controlled by officers (usually ex-Confederate) of integrity and honor, whose duty was to protect white men and women of the South against crime and oppression, by such men as Thad Stephens, United States Senator from Pennsylvania, the worst South hater during Reconstruction, and the strongest negro lover in the United States. It took the best and most talented men in the South to handle affairs at home. The case was this:—

KLAN ORGANIZED FOR PROTECTION

The A.G.S.R.R. had just been constructed from Birmingham to Tuscaloosa. When it was built along from New Jonesboro to McCalla, a camp of Chinese laborers were located back there, who were employed by Col. Stanton, the contractor. These Chinese raided every hen roost in the neighborhood, and committed other depredations.

The Ku Klux Klan was very orderly but very powerful in the State at that time. They went into this camp one night and flushed them like a covey of birds. The Chinese were scattered in every direction the next day, but they did not enter the premises of the people along the line any more. Stanton complained to the Judge. The Judge knew every man in this circuit. He promised Col. Stanton he would call the Grand Jury together and investigate the matter, saying at the same time down on the streets, "I will teach those damn boys a lesson, they think they are going to run this county."

The Judge's threat was over the county before night—everybody was ordered to go home and have a witness that he was at home, especially on a certain night. Two men came into my room, quietly sat down by the fire, close up near the head of my bed. They thought I was asleep, but I was awake when they came in, and did not move a muscle. They commenced talking in a low undertone and being a boy only fourteen (14) the subject grew more interesting to me. I discovered something had happened. The Federal Government was moving in the direction of the South.

The second night after the Judge made a public declaration that he would teach the boys a lesson, about 9 o'clock someone knocked at the door. Someone answered. A request was made to see the Judge just a moment on the gallery. The Judge came leisurely down the hall to the front door, and when he turned the light on his visitor, (the Judge declared afterwards, "I never met a more polite gentleman in my life.") He stood in front of the Judge with the dignified bearing of a seasoned Army Officer. His appearance was prepossessing, really handsome. He was dressed in a well-fitting, new gray suit, was cleanly shaven, had steel grey eyes, blond appearance, weight about 175 pounds, six feet tall, a perfect Norman-knight. He was supposed to have been a cavalry officer in the Confederate Army, and was distinguished as a veritable Cavalier Bayard of those troublesome days—sans peur et sans reproche. He addressed the Judge very graciously, saying: "Sir, my visit to you is on a very pleasant and important mission. You need have any fear of bodily harm, when I tell you, that your home is encircled by three hundred klansmen." He continued, "We understand you propose to teach these 'Damned' boys they cannot run this county. Instead of delivering your charge to the Grand Jury Monday, I shall ask you to deliver it to my horsemen." Then lifting his helmet, he said, "Do not hesitate, come on with me and look each klansman squarely in the eye and tell me if you have ever seen a single one of them in your life." The moon was shining bright. Each klansman and his horse was in full regalia. The Cyclops gave the command, "Lift your hoods." Three hundred heads were bared to the bending sky of heaven. The Cyclops courteously offered his arm to the Judge who walked around the circle of horsemen, looked each klansman squarely in his eye, face to face and when they had completed the inspection, the Judge said, "I have never seen a single one of these men to know him in my life." The Cyclops in a most dignified manner clasped hands with the Judge and said, "Judge, I hope sir, no similar state of circumstances will ever call us together again; so I bid you, a happy good evening." The Judge lifted his hat, and expressed his "thanks for having called."

On account of Judicial notice of these infractions and the threat made, it was thought that General N. B. Forrest had sent his old Chief of Artillery down to handle the matter in a diplomatic way, but to handle it, he was said to be cool, and calculating; a young, handsome engineer, a brave, courageous Chief of Artillery. "All's well that ends well,"—no one hurt, no one humiliated, no one apparently knew it and the Chinese depredations stopped, the good of the community was served and the incident closed.

As far as I know, I never heard of Prof. McAdory participating in any further service rendered by the Klan after this date. He obeyed the mandate of the higher officers of that secret organization.

ILLUSTRATION FOR GOOD OF COMMUNITY

This was the 2nd case—During the days of slavery, “Big Jim” belonged to Mr. Thomas H. Owen. Mr. Owen was one of the highly respected and honored gentlemen in the community.

Mr. Owen’s children, both boys and girls, were graduates of the best colleges and universities in the State, and “Big Jim” was the negro foreman on the plantation. Big Jim was very efficient and rendered good service.

The Union League had reached considerable proportions, nine-tenths of the negroes were members, the carpet-baggers and renegades became a menace to the community, they too were members of the League.

Prof. McAdory was called upon to put an end to it. He gained the inner circles of the Union, secured information from the inside, then he wrote the parts for a negro Minstrel Show, selecting the best men he had to play the parts of end men in the minstrel. They were blackened and played to perfection the proceedings of the Union League’s last meetings. They read out the names of all the white men in the community who had secretly slipped into the Union. This completely broke up the League in that section of Jefferson County, Alabama.

This Minstrel Show did real good in purging the community of malicious mischief. This play did more good than anything which had occurred for the protection of white supremacy, of orderly conduct, and for the betterment of society in the community of Pleasant Hill Academy. This Minstrel Show emanated from the brains of Professor McAdory. It was more than a display of talent, which made use of the material on hand, it had a deep and far reaching effect upon the community. It was creative genius which had no parallel, not only in this case but in every instance in which Reconstruction raised its hydro-headed form.

Member of Alabama Legislature and County Superintendent

Prof. Isaac Wellington McAdory yielded to the strong solicitation of the voters of Jefferson County, Ala., to become a candidate for a seat in the House of Representatives of the Alabama Legislature, and was elected by a nice majority twice—in 1876-1877, 1886-1887. He was appointed on the Public School Committee for the special purpose of drafting a Bill which would cure the defects in the law as it stood on the statute of 1886-87. He was successful in his undertaking, and gave to the State the benefit of an experienced and practical teacher in the public schools of the State. He filled the office of County Superintendent of Education for 14 years, and resigned on account of his health. He gave to Jefferson County, Alabama, 33 years of active service in Educational work. He helped to prepare the substitute that was enacted into the School Law of Alabama—the first under our Constitution. He was the author of the Henry School Bill which (was introduced by Prof. Henry) provides for a County School Fund.

His power and influence in this State will continue to spread like the oscillating waves, started from a falling pebble on the placid waters of a beautiful sea, and will go on, and on, until they lash the shores of Eternity.

Methods of Teaching

Prof. McAdory was a teacher and principal of a school for boys and girls from the first grade to students applying for admittance into colleges and universities of higher educational attainments. He was a moral and religious man. He would do everything he could to reenforce, to fortify character in the formative state of the innocent child in school. He spent hours trying to bring out character building in the most impressive manner.

“Go to the board and write the name of the best man you know. Then write the name of the greatest man you know.”

Of course the little fellows would write, “Daddy.” Sometimes the larger students would write the names and broaden their research and become quite interesting in the demonstrations of the hour. He never forgot that he was a Confederate soldier, and as he had stepped out of the Army into the schoolroom he used many illustrations from Confederate States History. For instance he would say, “Give me your chalk and I will write my model and tell you what he said in the schoolrooms to his boys.” First, “I will say—General Robert E. Lee was the best man I ever knew, and the greatest man in America," then he would read a paragraph or passage from what General Lee had said on States' Rights or Reconstruction or the government. I remember distinctly, he was a fine, spirited reader.

When enthusiastic he grew eloquent and especially when reading such extracts as this spoken by General Lee:

"General Lee in December, 1866, in that period when he was devoting his best efforts to reconciliation of the North and the South said, 'While I have considered the preservation of the constitutional power of the General Government to be the foundation of our peace and safety at home and abroad, I yet believe that the maintenance of the rights and authority reserved in the States and to the people is not only essential to the adjustment and balance of the general system, but the safeguard to the continuance of a free government.

"'I consider it the chief source of stability to our present system; whereas the consolidation of the states into one vast republic, is sure to be aggressive abroad and despotic at home, will be the certain precursor of that ruin which has overwhelmed all those that preceded it.'" This was his method of teaching Southern History.

Prof. McAdory was never happier than when discussing the life and character of his great chieftains, General Lee and Jackson.

He was a great believer in Ben Hill, and could talk of General J. T. Morgan fluently. In fact he was a dear lover of all the old Confederate Generals, except Beauregard. He lost confidence in his integrity of Southern character. He thought Zeb Vance a great man and never forgot Jeff Davis, a dear old man, much abused.

"Let our children learn the story,
And that story e'er defend:
Let them know their father's glory,
Dying for the rights of men;
Let them never feel dishonored
When they hear them "rebels" named
Of Lee and all our peerless braves
They can never be ashamed."

He used to make us read what they said in praise of the South, against which an untrue feeling has been fostered from such poems as "The Battle Hymn of the Republic"—in which our "Soldiers in Gray are represented as heathen and barbarians and the Northern Soldiers as Ministers of God on their way to smite the Southern host."

Prof. McAdory had no written rules or regulations for discipline and government of conduct of his students in attendance at Pleasant Hill Academy. Each case stood upon its own merits or demerits and he applied the general principle of common sense in solving every problem however difficult.

I have seen him go to the blackboard and write as many rules for the conduct of the students, as the board would hold, then turn and face the school room and say: "No, we will have only one rule, and that is—'Do Right.'" and with one stroke he would clear the board.

He would often say: "Ask yourself the question, What shall I do in this matter? and your conscience will tell you in a second; Do right. Follow the Moral Law."

He never punished the little fellows by applying the rod; I sat in his school room for three scholastic years and I did not see this punishment inflicted a single time on a child in school.

On a bright spring morning Prof. McAdory called on his class in Rhetoric. By accident I was prepared. It was a written composition and we were required to read them in open class recitation and then hand them in for correction. When I finished reading my paper I handed it to him. His remarks were exceedingly praiseworthy and I unexpectedly felt very good. This was not all—Later in the day he called me to his desk, with my paper in his hand, he said: "Why do you spell so miserably? Will you ever learn to spell?" It caught me in mid-air without an alibi. I mumbled something and finally said, "Lexicographers tell us that Washington and LaFayette could not spell correctly." Whereupon Prof. McAdory became rather indignant and replied, "Both Washington and LaFayette were men of genius." They were builders of Constitutional Governments.

Retrospect—Commencement Day at Pleasant Hill

In turning backward the pages of history of this old Academy, for a period of sixty-seven years, I catch green spots in memory's great waste, where the roses of Sharon on the plains of Palestine still bloom in youthful fragrance, which give life and vigor to old age. I see thru the spectre of years, just South of the Old Academy a long ditch, (or pit as they called it) being dug, with fresh earth thrown out and green oak bars laid across it—The sacrificial lambs being dressed and brought in to barbecue for dinner on the ground the next day—Commencement, closing of the present session—then 1871. An arbor extending from the main building to the old church on the hill is being erected for tomorrow's exercises. Col. Lewis from over the mountain in Shelby County will be here to deliver the Commencement Address.

The examinations are to be held in open air under the arbor, in the forenoon, interspersed by declamations. The students memorized extracts from speeches selected by Prof. McAdory from distinguished orators. I remember distinctly my first speech was assigned to me by Miss Maria Owen McAdory, assistant teacher. The speech was written by her brother, James Thomas McAdory, and was his graduating oration on Commencement Day at the University of Alabama. The subject was: "John C. Calhoun." She placed that speech in my hands, and said: "Follow his course."

She was a refined, cultured woman, and an excellent teacher and disciplinarian, who had charge of the girls in the school room.

Then came dinner on the grounds. I wish I were young again—Oh Ye Gods:

"Backward, turn backward, O Time in your flight, Make me a child again just for tonight."

The barbecued lamb, pork, and broiled chicken, the blended coffee and barrels of lemonade, with tin cups supplied. Then too, the dinner, augmented by baskets of custards and pies, sliced ham (sugar cured) and pickles, boiled eggs stuffed with pickles, french dressing, mustard and chow-chow, salt and pepper with a strong dash of paprika; the home-made bread, hot rolls and beaten biscuits which are always an asset to any dinner. But we must not forget that the good women of the community were due the thanks for this great pleasure—for since the way to a man's heart is through his stomach, and a true test of a pudding is in its eating. I judge all of the dinner was good since we all ate very heartily and felt satisfaction had been done. God bless the good women and may their good dinners continue to grace their tables for the future generations.

As night approached great preparations were made for the comedy plays, the minstrels, and theatricals, and too, the boys and girls were all let loose under the protection of their parents, and their joy, and happiness commenced for the general fun and merry making. Darkness silently approached, and the laughing face of the big round full moon crept up from behind the mountain to find the lovers ready to run and don their regalia. The show opened to its fullest extent, and happiness reigned supreme. When the drum tapped for lights out all left in happy good order. Angels and fellow spirits bid all of them God-speed.

In order that old Pleasant Hill may continue to grow under the same line of thought and policy with which Prof. McAdory founded his school, we quote:

“Abou Ben Adhem—(May his tribe increase!)
Awoke one night from a deep dream of peace,
And saw, within the moonlight in his room,
Making it rich, and like a lily in bloom,
An angel writing in a book of gold;
Exceeding peace had made Ben Adhem bold,
And to the presence in the room he said,
‘What writest thou?’ The vision raised its head,
And, with a look made of all sweet accord
Answered, ‘The names of those who love the Lord.’
‘And is mine one?’ said Abou. ‘Nay, not so.’
Replied the angel.—Abou spoke more low,
But cheerily still, and said, ‘I pray thee, then,
‘Write me as one that loves his fellow-men.’
The angel wrote, and vanished. The next night
It came again, with a great wakening light.
And showed the names whom love of God had blessed,—
And lo! Ben Adhem’s name led all the rest.”

I. W. McAdory loved his fellow-man.

MARY ELIZA PRUDE, b. Aug. 28, 1845, in Jefferson County, Alabama, at Glenn Springs just west of Bessemer—when it was a plantation. She was educated at the Tuscaloosa Female College (Methodist College), having only one more year before graduation, but the Federal troops captured the City, destroying by burning and plundering the buildings of the University of Alabama, and other buildings of interest in 1866.

The school was dismissed immediately upon arrival of the soldiers in the City. She was married to Judge Newberne Hobbs Browne, Jan. 21, 1874. He was born December 24, 1824, and died in Tuscaloosa, Ala., March 25, 1891. He was prepared for the University of Alabama by Dr. Richard Furman who lived and had his school in the City of Tuscaloosa, Ala., graduating from the University with the degree of A.B. in 1846 and A.M., 1849. He read law in the office of Judge B. F. Porter who was a practicing lawyer and was the author of Porter's Digest of Alabama Laws, and Supreme Court Decisions. Judge Browne entered the practice of law in 1848, being a partner with young Stephen Miller. He was elected to the legislature in 1853-1859. In 1860 he was elected State Solicitor of the 6th. Judicial Circuit of Alabama, he resigned this office and joined Lumsden's Battery in the Confederate States Army. He saw active service.

While in the service Judge Browne's friends ran him against Judge William R. Smith for Congressman from the 6th. Judicial District, but while he did not return home to campaign the race between the two men was very close.

Judge Browne served also as a Trustee of the University, 1858-1864, Trustee Alabama Bryce Hospital, 1874-1890, elected to State Legislature, 1872-1874, Editor Tuscaloosa Observer, 1851-1853, Probate Judge of Tuscaloosa, Ala., 1874-1892, but resigned on account of ill health, 1890. Died March 25, 1891. He was a public official for 56 years of his life.

Mary Eliza Prude married Judge Newberne Hobbs Browne at the old Prude homestead in Section 22, Township 21, Range 9 West, in Tuscaloosa, Alabama. The old residence was built by William Duncan in 1822, and in 1939 is practically unchanged; as to the two story part of the building, the one story part was added to the west side, being moved from the Snow place, known today as the John Jordan place. My grandfather owning both the Snow and Duncan places in 1857, when this part of the residence was added to the Duncan house. The Duncan residence was located 1822-1938, about (100) one hundred yards on the North East corner of the North West Quarter of the South West Quarter Section (22) Twenty-two, Township 21, Range 9 West, Tuscaloosa County, Alabama. I am describing the old Prude home definitely and accurately as it has been in the Prude family, about three quarters of a century and may be of some interest to our posterity in the coming years.

To Judge Newberne Hobbs Browne and Mary Eliza Prude were born the following children, all of whom are living:

- I. Jessie Browne, b. Feb. 26, 1875.
- II. Mary Emma Browne, b. July 16, 1877.
- III. Lula Hobbs Browne, b. June 12, 1880.
- IV. Pattie Owen Browne, b. March 21, 1882.
- V. Stella Searcy Browne, b. Aug. 3, 1883.
- VI. Newberne Allen Browne, b. Feb. 1, 1886.

THOMAS OWEN PRUDE, b. July 9, 1847; d. Nov. 5, 1864. He joined the Confederate Army before he was of the required age, and was 17 yrs. 3 mos. and 26 days old when he died in the service of C.S.A. He entered the service April, 1864 before he was 17 in July, wearing a uniform woven by old Aunt Pattie Elmore—the black mammy who had been the nurse of his mother after her mother died, 1823.

OLE BLACK MAMMY

April 28 Broadcast

I'se eard de ole folks talkin' 'bout blood bein' thicker 'n water, Meanin' you love yo kin folks bes'; yo ma, yo son, an yo daughter.
But dis ole mammy don't gree wid dat, case my bosom's own pet lambie Want nary spec er kin ter me, I wuz jes' his ole Black Mammy.

Yo see, my young misis tuk sick an' died, when dat boy wan but ten days ole,

An' she ax me would I nuss 'm and treasure him like gole—
Couse I'd nussed her when she wuz a baby too, back down in Alabama,
An' she knowed dat I'd be good to 'm fo' I wuz his Ole Black Mammy.

I fed 'm his vittles frum a spoon an slep on d' flo beside 'm;
Folks all sed I'se gwinna spile 'm so nobody could'n bide 'm.
I'd walk de flo befo day and nite tell my foots could'n h'dly carry me.
Nobody else could'n tech 'n chile, 'ceptin' me, his Ole Black Mammy.

Well he jes grow'd frum day to day, an' he sho wuz fine and dandy.
I'd fry 'm do-nuts den, and I'd pull him lasses candy:
An' when I'd wash 'm up at nite, all mussed and gummed and jammy
He'd hug my neck and say his prayers ,ter me, his Ole Black Mammy.

Den he went away ter school—Lawdy, how I missed 'm,
An when he cum home at Christmus time, I grabbed 'm and I kissed 'm,
An in de summer vacation he went to his ma's folks in Alabama;
An' when he cum home he brung er gole ring, ter me, his Ole Black Mammy.

Den dat ole war bruck loose an' when he volunteered,
Honey, I could'n eat nor sleep, my ole heart wuz so skerred.
An' on my knees befo day and nite I prayd fur my precious lambie
Dat de Lawd would bring 'm back safe n' sound, ter me, his Ole Black Mammy.

An' he cum back frum de war al' rite, but he want a boy no longer.
His eyes hit had a fur away look, 'n his jaw hit sot lots stronger.
But he jes grabbed holt er bof my hands, 'n dey so ole 'n black 'n clammy,
An he sed "God bless ye precious soul, 'n he hugged his Ole Black Mammy.

Now—I'se done de bes I knowed, dear Lawd, but 'f he's done air thing wrong,

When he cum up to de jedgment, you put de blame whar hit belong.
Case I done mount ter much no-how n' you skuse my precious lambie,
An' take 'm in, an shut me out—jes me—his Ole Black Mammy.

Mrs. George Webb.

He was carried to the hospital after fighting Sherman around Rome, Georgia.

He was stricken with typhoid fever and an order issued and signed by the Surgeon of the 8th. Alabama Cavalry.

“Private Thomas O. Prude, C. “K” 8th. Alabama Cavalry, has permission to go to the wagon train and report for duty.”

(Signed) J. W. Strudwick, Ass't. Surgeon,
8th. Alabama Cavalry.

Another order followed immediately and Thomas Owen Prude was sent to hospital in Talladega, Alabama. His mother and friend, John Robertson, went at once to his bedside and perfectly conscious until the end he talked with his mother and made disposition of his belongings, asked that she (his mother) keep his horse but give his gun and his watch to his little brother, James Oscar Prude, who was then only 7½ years old. Thus the life of young Thomas Owen Prude was ended and he sleeps today in the quiet little Cemetery at Hopewell Church, Tuscaloosa, Ala. The horse which Thomas Owen Prude asked his mother to keep was exchanged for a pure gold watch, which was given to her daughter, Mary Eliza (Prude) Browne, and after her death returned to her mother to be kept for her son until he was 21 years of age. Today Newberne Allen Browne has the watch (worn by his mother for so long) with him in Chicago, Ill. Thos. Owen Prude enlisted under Capt. Wm. Sherwood Lawrence, Co. K. 8th. Ala. Reg.

JAMES OSCAR PRUDE, SR., b. Sept. 23, 1856. Planter and County Official. He was educated in the Pleasant Hill Academy under Prof. I. W. McAdory, 1870-1873. He entered the University of Alabama from which he graduated with the B.S. degree in 1876. After completing his education he was given a rural school in Tuskaloosa, which position he held for two years, 1877-1879. He read medicine under a noted practitioner, but later abandoned the idea of becoming a physician. He was appointed Clerk of Probate Court of Tuskaloosa County, serving under his brother-in-law, Judge Newberne Hobbs Browne, 1880-1884, after which date he was elected Sheriff for a term of four years. In 1891 he became Clerk of Circuit Court and served for six years. In 1898 he opened a bond and brokerage business which he continued until 1909 when he retired to his plantation, "Owenwood," to devote his time to other interests.

J. O. Prude, Sr., is the oldest living graduate of the University of Alabama, and his grand daughter, Lucie Prude Bates, has the honor of being the youngest student at this same institution, from which her grandfather graduated 63 years ago.

In January, 1939, James Oscar Prude, Sr. was awarded a Certificate of Merit and elected as a Fellow in the American Institute of Genealogy, because of his original work in research.

He is a Democrat, a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church South, of Tuskaloosa, Alabama. A charter member of the Odd Fellows, and was a steward in the First Methodist Episcopal Church South for several years.

He married Lucy Avery Browne, b. Aug. 4, 1863, at the Avery home in Greensboro, Ala.—to which place her mother, Agnes Emily (Brumby) Browne had refugeed during the War of Secession. She was educated at Clinton, Mississippi, and at Mary Sharpe College in Winchester, Tennessee. She was a cultured and lovable woman.

Lucy Avery Browne's paternal ancestor, Jesse Browne was a native of France—she was a great-great-great grand daughter of Jesse Browne, who was born in Manchester, England, who migrated to North Carolina. He was one of the first settlers of the country and at a time when escape from the Indians was necessary, Henry Browne, her ancestor, built a home with a tunnel which runs from the cellar to the banks of the James River, four miles in length, which still stands today. This house was located four and a half miles from Jamestown—near an old oak tree. The plantation is known as "Four Mile Tree," the estate of Col. Henry Browne.

Lucy Avery Browne Prude, died in Tuskaloosa, Alabama, Saturday morning, June 30, 1900. She is buried in Evergreen Cemetery, Tuskaloosa, Alabama.

James Oscar Prude remained a widower, caring for his seven children—all of whom were small, the oldest being 16 at the time of his wife's death. All of his children are devoted to him for he has proven himself a loving, considerate, devoted father—caring for his children in the capacity of father and mother. Though all are living except one, he is held in reverent respect by each and every one. This little verse will show the gratitude and feeling which each one of his children holds for him—though this verse was sent to him by his oldest son, J. O. Prude, Jr., on his 80th. Christmas Day.

This is the line I pen for him.

“Only a Dad but the best of men.”

“I’d like to be the kind of friend that you have been to me,
I’d like to be the help that you’ve been always glad to be,
I’d like to mean as much to you each minute of the day
As you have meant ‘Fine dad of mine’ to me along the way.”

To Lucy Avery (Browne) and J. O. Prude, Sr., were born the following children, to-wit;

- I. Agnes Brumby Prude, b. March 30, 1884.
- II. James Oscar Prude II, b. Aug. 3, 1885.
- III. William Wellington Prude III, b. April 16, 1887; d. Nov. 15, 1914, at Harvard University.

- VIII. Thos. Maxwell Prude, b. Aug. 6, 1897.
- IX. Madeline Prude, b. June 15, 1902.

After the death of his wife, Claiborne Prude married Mrs. Sarah E. Buckner. To them were born no children.

Claiborne Gentry Prude was born in Fayette County, Texas. He was educated in Moultain, Lavaca County, Texas, but most of his education may have been said to have come from experience, reading and observation.

Mr. Prude has been in the cattle raising business since he was 20 years of age, starting in 1876. From Fayette County he went to McCulloch County, thence to Fort Davis, Texas, and on into Otero County, New Mexico, near Weed. In 1897 he located the Bullis Spring Ranch on the Gaudelope Mountains in Chaves County, N. Mexico. His sons now own the ranch.

Claiborne Gentry Prude is a Methodist, at Hope, New Mexico, a Democrat, a Scottish Rite Mason, 32 degree Mason and Shriner. He has been Justice of the Peace for six years at Hope, New Mexico, and has been elected for another six-year term at Hope, New Mexico, where he now resides. Still living, an old gentleman with fine features and an abundance of snow-white hair. His daughter, Madeline, who is a trained nurse, resides with her father at the present time, caring for him most lovingly.

JOHN CHANDLER PRUDE, b. July 25, 1857; d. 1923. He was married June 16, 1892 to Juliette McCombs. The family came to Colorado, Texas, over 40 years ago and have made this their home ever since.

He was a successful cattleman and a director in the Colorado National Bank. In the death of John Chandler Prude the community lost one of its leading citizens. He was progressive and public-spirited in his ideas, and liberal with his means in supporting various benevolent, civic and educational programs. He was a member of the Episcopal Church in Colorado, Texas, acting as a vestryman and active with Dr. Ellis as Rector in all Church work.

The highest memoriam was paid him by his Church Rector that words could express.

To John Chandler Prude and Juliette McCombs were born the following children, to-wit;

- I. Carey C. Prude, b. June 16, 1893.
- II. Lois Prude, b. Oct. 9, 1895.
- III. John M. Prude, b. May 22, 1904.

One night as I, J. O. Prude, was sitting in a lodge room, the Episcopal Minister, Rev. Ellis was sitting next to me—he had just taken charge of the Church here. I was introduced to him by a friend. When my name was called, he said, “Prude? Prude? —yes.” “One of the best friends I had at Colorado City was John Prude—he was a lay member in the Episcopal Church and a very wealthy gentleman. He owned practically half of the city and numerous herds of cattle on the plains of Texas. A gentleman of refinement and culture.”

MILTON H. MABRY, b. June 17, 1851 in Pickens County, at Bridgeville, Alabama, but died in Tampa, Florida, March 3, 1919. He moved to Florida in 1879 and was Lieutenant Governor of Florida from 1884-1888, Justice of the Supreme Court of Florida 1891-1903. He married Ella Dale Bramlitt, b. March 28, 1856; d. 1904

Judge Milton Harvey Mabry was born June 17, 1851 in Pickens County, Alabama. He was a son of Jesse Hughes and Martha Caroline (Prude) Mabry. While he was still a boy his family moved to Verona, Mississippi. He attended the University of Mississippi, later graduating in law from Cumberland University, Lebanon, Tennessee.

Milton Harvey Mabry was married at Verona in December, 1876, to Ella Dale Bramlitt. She was the daughter of Dr. John Woodson Bramlitt and his wife, Elizabeth Turner Bramlitt.

Milton Harvey Mabry was Mayor of Tupelo, Miss., before he removed with his family to Leesburg, Lake County, Florida, in 1879. He practiced law there for ten years, during which time he was a member of the state legislature, and was elected and served as lieutenant-governor for four years, 1884-88. He moved his family to Tallahassee in 1891, when he was elected a Justice of the Supreme Court of Florida. He was Judge for two terms, from 1891 to 1903. He did not run for re-election again because of ill health.

Ella Dale (Bramlitt) Mabry died in March, 1904, at Tampa, Florida, where the family had recently moved. In January, 1907, Judge Mabry married Irene Washburn, in Louisville, Kentucky. After their marriage they lived in Tallahassee and later in Tampa. It was in Tampa that Judge Mabry died, March 3, 1919.

To Ella Dale Bramlitt and Milton Harvey Mabry were born the following children, to-wit ;

- I. Giddings Eldon Mabry, b. Oct. 8, 1877.

- VIII. Dale Mabry, b. March 22, 1891 ; d. Feb. 21, 1922.
- IX. Eloise Mabry, b. June 10, 1893.

After the death of his wife, Ella Dale (Bramlitt) Mabry, in 1904, Judge Mabry married Irene Washburn, a young lady of charm, beauty and refinement, one of Kentucky's loveliest girls. She proved herself a most devoted wife and a loving mother. Mrs. Mabry is living and resides with her only child, Harton Mabry, in Daytona Beach, Florida, where he is a member of a prominent law firm.

Mrs. Irene Washburn Mabry and the widow of Judge Robert Fenwick Taylor have been closely associated in civic and religious life. The husbands of both of these ladies are relatives of Mary Eloise Prude—one a kinsman on her father's side, the other on her mother's.

By this marriage they had one child, to-wit ;

- X. Harton Washburn Mabry, b. 1908.

MABRY TRADITION

"The Mabry family were Presbyterians, they came to America from Scotland long before the American Revolution. It has been said that the father of Jesse Hughes Mabry I and his brother fought in the Revolution and one of them had the misfortune to lose an ear at the battle of Cowpens. At this early period they were living in Carolina."
